

Kelsey... On my 19th Birthday I was able to go out feeling beautiful and blonde again in my amazing new wig.

One month before my 19th birthday I was told I had alopecia and that my body was attacking itself and I was slowly losing patches of hair. The patches started small and within not even 30 days I was completely bald. I thought that it was the end of the world when I lost all of my hair because I felt like the "disease" had taken away apart of my identity and I didn't see myself as "beautiful" anymore.

The day that the patches started to become noticeable I quit my job and stopped going out with friends and in public because I was so embarrassed and ashamed of what I looked like, my confidence went from sky rocketing to near to none.

I had the best support group anyone could have ever asked for who helped me get through all the stages of my alopecia and the best group of Doctors trying but nothing was able to bring back my confidence of being my old social self again.

This all changed the day that I found my first wig which I fell in love with and managed to bring back my confidence to go out in public feeling pretty again. On my 19th Birthday I was able to go out feeling beautiful and blonde again in my amazing new wig and no one was even able to tell that secretly I had no hair.

As much as I LOVE my wig and it has given me the confidence to get my social life back on track, there are things I have had to say no to doing like swimming and exercising with friends due to the impracticality and low self confidence due to having no hair and a wig that has been made purely for the look of hair.
